

COMPLIANCE AS-A SERVICE

A TARGET-RICH ENVIRONMENT

Research shows that the average cost of a data breach in the US is $8.19 Million, an increase from $7.91 Million in 2018 and more than twice the global average. Over 100 million Americans have had their personally identifiable information (PII) compromised in insurance sector data breaches. The well-publicized success of these attacks combined with the well-known fact that various types of companies store vast amounts of sensitive means that these attacks will only continue to grow.

ABOUT COMPLIANCE REQUIREMENTS

In response to these growing threats, the various governing institutions and bodies have issued a number of Cybersecurity and Compliance regulations aimed at keeping sensitive data secure and better controlling the process for regaining data and security in the event of a data breach. These regulations have a number of requirements that organizations and businesses must follow in order to properly protect the data of their customers, partners, and employees.

If you conduct business in an industry with information storage regulations, ensuring compliance is essential to your business success. These various regulations cover virtually every area of where business and technology intersect, including:

- Cybersecurity
- Data Integrity
- Incident Response Management
- Regulatory Reporting
- Risk & Vulnerability Assessments
- Security Policy Enforcement
- System Integrity
- Consumer Privacy
